Step 1: Define the priority - Write down what successful hydration and fitness looks like this week.

Step 2: Schedule it - Put the key action blocks on the calendar before the week gets crowded.

Step 3: Use a backup version - Decide what the shorter or easier version will be on low-energy days.

Step 4: Track execution - Notice what was completed instead of relying on memory or mood.

Step 5: Review and adjust - Keep what worked and fix only the parts that added friction.

- Protect the habit even when the ideal version is not possible.
- Look for trends across weeks instead of judging one rough day.
- A plan you can repeat will usually outperform a plan that only looks impressive.

Conclusion
